

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to methods and compositions for detecting a substance using mixed or multiple element capture agents (MECA). The affinity of a 5 MECA for a target is produced by the concomitant binding of at least two low to moderate affinity capture agents providing a high affinity interaction with a capture target.